HALL OF PLATEAU INDIANS

By Hand Through Memory

PICTURE MATCH

Can you find these women in the exhibit?

Find the sign that is titled “Remembering the Seasonal Round” to help you fill in the blank.

Warm Spring Indians, like other Plateau people, retain their spiritual ties to the land by preserving the memory of the seasonal round. One way is the annual root digging harvest. In early spring, women from different generations gather at certain places on the reservation, sing songs of thanks, then harvest edible roots in the manner of their ancestors.

Word Bank: thanks, memory, Plateau, spring, roots, harvest

Discuss

Do you think these three women are related? Can you hear the airplane?

Based on the sound you hear and what the women are wearing, do you think these women have to dig roots for food to survive or can they drive and purchase food from the grocery store? Why?

SPIRIT OF THE WEST | Trappers and Traders

Can you find this shelter? This is how Fur Traders lived 200 years ago!

Look around you, and maybe backtrack a little. What do you think they are trapping and trading?

Answer: beaver

Explanation: Fur trappers would have taken any mammal pelt from the region, but beaver were the most prized. The values of different animal pelts were based on their quality and standing compared to beaver pelts. Beaver were prized for their thick, water-resistant fur that would be packed and shipped to the United Kingdom where the pressed fur felt would be shaped into hats and other outerwear. The Pacific Northwest was abundant in all furs which were taken liberally without care of environmental impacts to the region and ecosystems.

Discuss

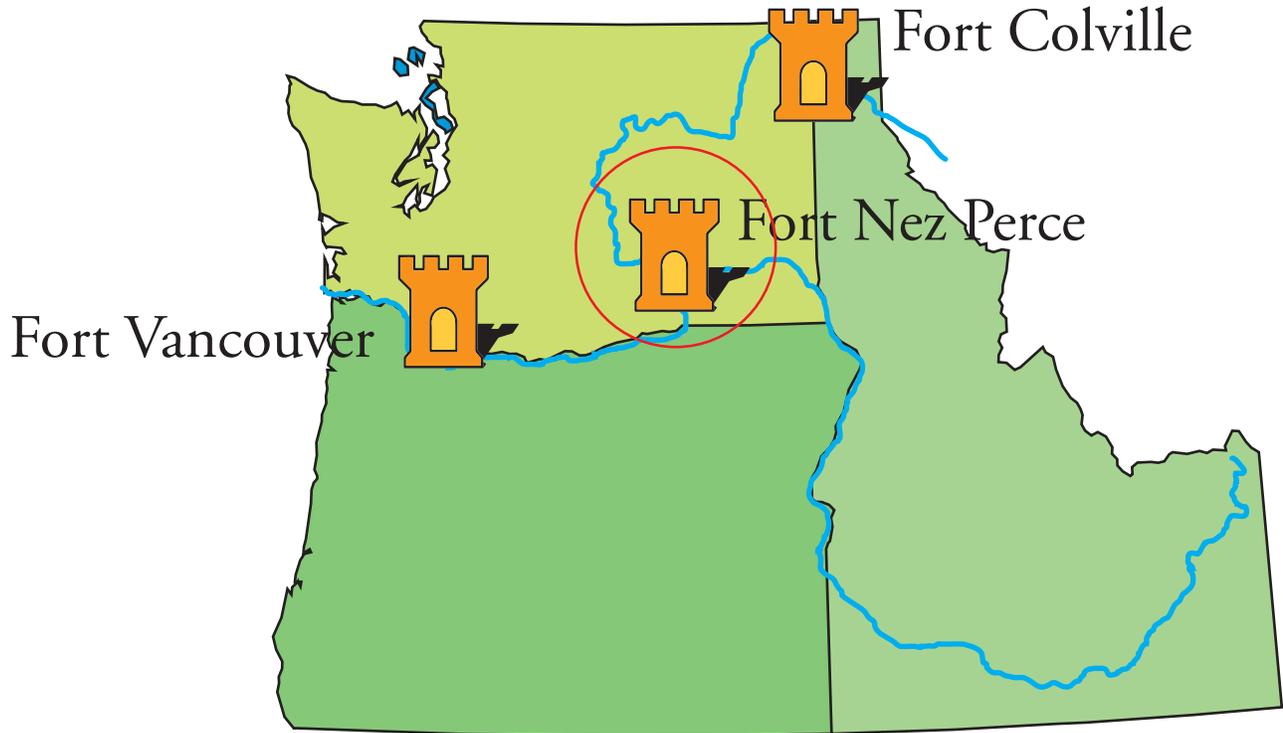

They are trapping and trading beaver to be made into hats. Beaver is a great fur; it has natural oils that make it water resistant. What would happen to the ecosystem if the trappers take all the beavers?

The tent to the left is the Brigade Leader, or the boss, of the fur trappers. What do you see in his tent that the other trappers don't have?

Do you think it's important to have someone who is in charge? Why or why not?

SPIRIT OF THE WEST | Fur Forts

GO TO THE FUR FORT

The Hudson's Bay Company established many forts.
On the map, circle the name of the recreated fort you are in.

What year it is?

1823

The forts were built close to large rivers. Why do you think that is important?

The forts were communities that supported many families and professions. The rivers provided transportation between different forts. Trappers were able to move packaged furs to the ships docked at the mouth of the Columbia River or Canada's Hudson Bay.
