ART IN THE WEST

2025 GALLERY GUIDE

The High Desert Museum is pleased to present Art in the West, an annual juried fine art exhibition and online silent auction featuring art that celebrates the landscapes, wildlife, people, cultures and history of the High Desert—a region that stretches from the eastern slope of the Cascades and Sierras to the Wyoming Basin and Colorado Plateau.

Experience the High Desert through the eyes of painters, sculptors, printmakers, glass artists, photographers and other creators. This exhibit includes artworks from regionally and nationally acclaimed artists.

Bring award-winning artwork into your own home: The artwork featured in the Art in the West exhibition are available for sale by online silent auction. You can ensure you get your favorite pieces through a Buy Now option. Final bidding will occur on Saturday, September 20 and the auction will close at 7:00 pm. Proceeds from the auction help support the Museum's programs and exhibitions, bringing science, history and art to lifelong learners.

Cristina Acosta is a West Coast and Latina artist who has lived her life by her brush. She painted her way around the West Coast as a window mural and sign painter, which helped her pay for a University of Oregon Bachelor of Fine Arts degree. This led to her career as a journeyman level billboard lettering and mural artist in Bend at Carlson Sign Co., when billboards were painted by hand, not produced by computers. An entrepreneurial artist, she developed and produced designs for her signature line of ceramic tiles, then marketed them nationally from her Bend, Oregon studio for 10 years. She sold them with various companies including Home Depot Expo and Ann Sacks Tile & Stone. Acosta wrote an instructional book about painting titled Paint Happy (North Light Books, 2002, 2004), taught college art classes for five years at Central Oregon Community College in Bend, and painted illustrations for children's books, including When Woman Became the Sea: A Costa Rican Creation Myth (Beyond Words Pub Co., 1998) and Bedwetting and Accidents Aren't Your Fault (O'Regan Press, 2014). Throughout the years, Acosta painted and drew for herself, experimenting with meditation and creation. She exhibits in galleries, museums and public spaces.

Maura Allen has been photographing the American West for more than two decades. She shows and sells her work as both a fine art photographer and mixed-media artist. Growing up in Northern California, Allen earned her Bachelor of Arts in Latin/Classical Studies at Stanford University, studying how iconic figures, myth and moments define a culture. When she began photographing the American West with ranchers and wranglers as her trusted guides, she realized many of the same cultural forces were at play. Today, Allen lives in the Williamson Valley of Arizona. Featured in Black & White Photography, Western Art & Architecture, Cowboys & Indians, SouthwestArt, Western Art Collector and more, Allen frequently speaks about chronicling the West. Her mixed-media work is shown in galleries nationwide and included in private, public and museum collections. Allen serves on the Board of Directors of Photolucida, a Portland, Oregon nonprofit dedicated to building community through photography, and the Board of Trustees of the Desert Caballeros Western Museum in Wickenburg, Arizona.

As an avid enthusiast of the outdoors, Richard Bacon loves to document the unique landscapes and textures of the Central Oregon region. While hiking and exploring are the usual drivers of his creativity, using aerial imagery to capture patterns and obtuse perspectives has become an increasingly larger part of his creative process. His photography captures the peaks, rivers, lakes, and waterfalls of Oregon. “I genuinely believe being outdoors can be a powerful tool for mental and physical health. If an image I captured can drive an individual to experience that scene, I feel I’ve achieved my goal.” Bacon lives and works in Bend, Oregon, with his wife, Lisa, and two children, Sawyer and Rowan.

Richard Bergeman is a fine art photographer who has been exhibiting his black-and-white prints throughout the Northwest for the past 40 years. After retiring from teaching in 2007, he focused his work on telling stories of Pacific Northwest history through photographs of what's been left behind. Originally a large-format photographer printing in both silver and platinum, he currently works with digital cameras converted to record infrared light and prints with archival pigment ink printers. Bergeman has self-published several books on forgotten chapters in Pacific Northwest history, including three on the High Desert: The Vanishing West, High Desert Dreams: The Lost Homesteads of the Fort Rock Basin, and East of Eden: Baker County Country. Since the late 1980s, Rich has mounted solo shows in galleries, museums and art centers in more than 20 cities throughout Oregon and Washington, and has work selected for countless juried shows in the region. He is represented in the permanent collections of the Hallie Ford Museum of Art in Salem, the City of Albany, Umpqua Community College and the University of Oregon William W. Knight Law School.

A painter and printmaker who trained at Otis College of Art and Design in Los Angeles and Southern Oregon University in Ashland, Oregon, Midge Black's prints and paintings are widely shown and awarded. Landscape themes predominate but abstract prints have become part of her body of work over time. Her prints have been shown nationally and internationally as well as in private collections. Black's goal is to make art that she has not seen before. She believes her work succeeds when it calls for a second look because it inspires a new feeling or thought. "I find that art is a constant renewal. Making a piece of art or looking at art is a direct encounter with possibilities and imagination. It's like a walk, a boat ride or train trip, an everchanging view of our world and of ourselves." Black focuses on relief printmaking using wood, linoleum and experimental surfaces. She produces prints based on the natural world of the West.

Meagan Blessing spent her formative years hiking and camping in the backcountry wilderness, packing on horseback and living and working in Western states from Montana to Alaska. These experiences gave her a deep appreciation for the wildlife she observed in her exploratory endeavors. Today, Blessing's love of the wide open spaces and wild inhabitants of the West informs her paintings. Her Modern Wild series features wildlife subjects rendered in a contemporary realist style with abstract influences. Using color, light and design, Blessing personifies her animal subjects with a sense of wonder and a modern aesthetic that is continually evolving in her practice. Blessing's work has been shown in national exhibitions, including The Russell: An Exhibition and Sale to Benefit the C. M. Russell Museum and The Russell: Art in Action in Great Falls, Montana; The Mountain Oyster Club Art Show & Sale in Tucson, Arizona; Art in the West at High Desert Museum in Bend, Oregon; Out West Art Show & Sale in Great Falls, Montana; and Cheyenne Frontier Days Western Art Show and Sale in Cheyenne, Wyoming. Rudi Broschofsky's artistic journey navigates the intriguing intersection of representation and abstraction. Adopting a street art approach within the realm of Western art, his process stands as a unique fusion of two distinct genres. Using the challenging medium of spray paint, Broschofsky is able to attain bold subjects and crisp lines through his calculated and recognizable stencil designs. Hand cutting these elaborate stencils with an X-Acto knife is time consuming. It can take several months to craft a single image. Up close, his subject matter appears nonrepresentational, but as one steps back, the composition becomes apparent.

Helen Brown is a Sunriver watercolor artist showing her work at the Tumalo Art Company in Bend, Oregon. Always a watercolor painter, she began working with rice paper and a batik style in 2013. Brown uses molten wax to control the watercolor on the highly absorbent paper. To finish the painting, she attaches the rice paper to 300-lb. watercolor paper for framing behind nonreflective glass. Her most influential instructors include Jean Grasdorf, Kathie George and her sister, Mary Burgess. Her work has been featured in national publications, including Splash: the Best of Watercolor in 2016 and 2017, and has garnered numerous awards in various local competitions. She was chosen to exhibit her work at the Oregon Historical Society in Portland in a show called My Journey with Lewis and Clark for four months in 2017. She is a member of the High Desert Art League, the Watercolor Society of Oregon, and the Tumalo Art Company.

Exploring the natural landscape is what Pamela Claflin is all about. Her deep love for nature, refuge areas, state and national parks, and their habitats are what makes her paint. She hopes that her true scenes of nature will give hope to the preservation of them. Using brush and palette knife, Claflin has participated in oil painting events in California, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Idaho, Utah, and Montana. She credits her painting knowledge to Delbert Gish, who worked with Russian master Sergei Bongart, for instilling the knowledge and techniques that she uses today. Further training was with Matt Smith, Robert Moore, Marc Hanson, Roger Dale Brown and Howard Friedland. Claflin has owned and operated art galleries for 25 years, including 18 years at Mockingbird Gallery in Bend and five years at Rimrock Gallery in Prineville, Oregon. She is now enjoying her time to paint, travel and spend time with friends and family.

Chris Cole is a kinetic sculptor and abstract painter. His mechanical works and large-scale, vibrant paintings study the intersections and disconnects between the industrial and natural worlds. Heavily influenced by technologies and aesthetics of the industrial revolution, his sculptural works use markedly complex mechanical structures to celebrate organic constructs. Conversely, his paintings expose beautiful machinery beneath organic frameworks. Having spent most of his life in small towns of the Northwest, proximity and the abundance of wilderness heavily influences Cole's subject matter, though he gravitates toward the abstract. Self-taught, he began painting as a teenager. In the mid 1990s, he branched into kinetic sculpture, for which he is now most recognized. Cole currently lives and works in Bend, Oregon.

Raised in New Jersey with easy access to the cultural riches of New York, Anne Gibson became an artist circuitously, though it had long been her dream. With a Bachelor of Arts in art history from Tufts University in Medford, Massachusetts, she worked at the Worcester Art Museum in Worcester, Massachusetts, doing publications and marketing. At a graphic design studio in Providence, Rhode Island, she designed catalogs and promotional materials for museums, galleries, and colleges. She took classes in printmaking, drawing, design, and typography at the School of Visual Arts in New York City, School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Massachusetts; and Rhode Island School of Design. After moving to Bend, Oregon three decades ago, the rivers, trails, lakes, and forests became her inspiration and cathedral. She worked as a freelance graphic designer, raised two children, and explored pastel, printmaking, and painting at the Bend Art Center and Central Oregon Community College. Acrylic painting became her chosen medium. Gibson is now a member artist at Tumalo Art Company in Bend, and a consignee at Hood Avenue Art in Sisters. Her work has appeared in group and solo shows in Bend, Portland, and the Oregon Coast and has been added to private, public, and corporate collections.

Lisa Gordon lives in Santa Fe, New Mexico. During her education, she developed a passion for bronze casting. The connection between the casting process and her fondness for horses is clearly seen in her powerful, yet sensitive sculptures. For her, the relationship that she develops with a horse while grooming and bonding through touch, mirrors the feeling of running her fingers over wax as it warms and molds into muscles and gestures that evolve into a horse's form and in turn into a sculpture. Gordon is breathing new life into a historical subject, and her sculptures show horses balanced on spheres, walking through hoops, straddling pedestals, swaying on rockers, or bouncing on springs. These powerful creatures in whimsical scenes are a metaphor for the human experience, demonstrating the balance between having fun and giving life purpose. Gordon's work has been featured in solo exhibitions and museum shows across the United States, including Coors Western Art Exhibit & Sale in Denver, Colorado, Cowgirl Up at the Desert Caballeros Western Museum in Wickenburg, Arizona, Heart of the West at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, Texas, Originals at the Albuquerque Hall of Fame in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and more.

Wyoming-based contemporary western artist Alexandra Hansen is known for her stylized vintage patina oil paintings. She grew up on a ranch in South Dakota and later went on to rodeo for, and study art at, Oklahoma State University. She left art school and became a serial entrepreneur starting and selling small businesses. It would be almost five years before she would pick up a paintbrush and remember her true passion in life — creating nostalgic western artwork with pops of color to illustrate her hope for a well-lived life. Over the course of the last few years, she has participated in several shows with Abend Gallery in Denver, Colorado, Cheyenne Frontier Days Old West Museum in Cheyenne, Wyoming, Coors Western Art Exhibit & Sale as well as several others. She has served on the board of directors for Matthews Opera House and Arts Center in Spearfish, South Dakota, and finds artistic volunteering opportunities within her communities integral to her artistic legacy. Hansen paints for several galleries and works on large-scale commission collections for both private and commercial spaces.

Susan Luckey Higdon is a native Oregonian known for her landscapes of iconic Central Oregon scenes, often featuring water, fish and birds. She began painting seriously more than 30 years ago, while still working as a graphic designer in advertising and raising her kids. Initially using soft pastels because of their immediacy and saturated color, she transitioned to acrylics to paint larger, continuing her use of strong composition and bold strokes of color. Luckey Higdon’s paintings have been selected for the prestigious Pastel 100 Art Competition and juried into shows by such iconic jurors as Wolf Kahn. Images from her “underwater world” series, featuring native trout, were used nationwide in McCormick & Schmick’s Seafood Restaurants. Her original paintings and giclee reproductions are in numerous corporate and personal collections. She has been featured in Italian flyfishing magazine H2O, Bend Magazine and Oregon Art Beat. She was the signature artist for the Deschutes River Conservancy’s RiverFeast event for 11 years. A founding member of Tumalo Art Company in Bend, Luckey Higdon’s Homeland Images card line has highlighted Central Oregon’s beauty for more than 20 years.

Judy Hoiness is a Bend artist and a fourth generation Oregonian. Her art advocates for the protection and preservation of wildlife and wild landscapes in Oregon and the Northwest. Her work is often described as abstract landscape that incorporates calligraphic marks, collage and mixed media using cloth and stitching. She combines abstract shapes with representational imagery to evoke the landscapes of the Northwest. Hoiness's work has garnered more than 50 awards in international, national and regional exhibitions. Her work has been featured in many art books and magazines. Explorative usage of watercolor and acrylic paint on paper, canvas and recycled cloth, combined with imaginative design elements contribute to the artist's style, which reveals simplified and abstracted shapes played against areas of representational imagery. Hoiness taught at Central Oregon Community College for more than 30 years and has lived in Bend for 55 years.

Dani Ives (she/her) is a self-taught artist based in Rogers, Arkansas. With a background in biology and conservation education, Ives brings a scientific lens and deep reverence for the natural world into her art. She is best known for her unique “painting with wool” technique, using needle felting to create highly detailed, textured images on fabric. Her work explores the emotional connections between humans, animals, and the environment, often reflecting themes of coexistence, identity, and transformation. Ives’s work has been exhibited nationally in galleries and museums, including Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art in Arkansas and the Historic Arkansas Museum. She is the author of Painting with Wool, a project-based book that has inspired thousands of fiber artists worldwide. Ives also teaches needle felting to students across the globe through online courses, in-person workshops, and artist residencies. Her accolades include a 2024 Artists 360 award from the Mid-America Arts Alliance and an Award of Excellence from Fiber Art Now, among others. Whether through her art or teaching, Ives is passionate about elevating needle felting as a respected fine art medium and creating meaningful work that invites viewers to reconnect with nature and themselves.

Barbara Jaenicke's artistic journey was launched in her early teens more so by hard work and stubborn determination than by natural giftedness. Not realizing that a career in fine art could be a possibility, she steered her college studies toward advertising, graphic design, and marketing. She was an advertising art director in her first career, then a corporate marketing communications manager years later. In 2002, she was able to turn her focus to a fine art career, pursuing it full steam ahead. Working in oil and pastel, Jaenicke strives to capture light-filled landscapes in an impressionist, painterly style. Although her finished work is painted primarily in the studio, a regular practice of painting outdoors enables her to create a genuine sense of light. Born and raised in New Jersey, Jaenicke also lived in Atlanta, Georgia, for many years until she yearned for snow and mountains for her landscape subject matter, which prompted her family's move to Bend, Oregon, in 2015. Barbara is also a popular workshop instructor throughout the U.S., teaching workshops coast to coast each year. She published Painting the Poetic Landscape: Lessons and Tips for Oil Painters and Pastel Artists that compiles 21 of her previously published online tutorials along with new content.

Ott Jones, a professional sculptor for 38 years, has created a diverse collection of wildlife and sporting sculpture. Grateful to be in prominent collections around the world, he was honored in having the late Queen Elizabeth II acquire Birth of the Labrador, a sculpture depicting Labradors in a dory, retrieving cod for British fishermen in the 1600s off the Newfoundland coast. An elected member of Allied Artists of America, National Sculpture Society, and Society of Animal Artists, Jones won several awards over the years including the Gold Medal of Honor in Allied Artists of America for his river otter monument, River Rascals, in 2022. Jones has participated in numerous juried shows and museum exhibitions, including at the Brinton Museum, C.M. Russell Museum, Coors Western Art Exhibit & Sale, High Desert Museum, Mountain Oyster Club, National Cowboy & Western Heritage Museum and National Museum of Wildlife Art. A lifetime of outdoor experiences and field work provided him firsthand knowledge of wildlife. In creating sculptures, Jones strives to capture the essence of his subject's form, beauty and personality while incorporating these qualities into a strong composition. His objective is not to duplicate nature but rather interpret it through blending realism and artistic merit.

Horses have always held an important and noble role in relation to the ranch and her family. Her experience with horses comes from participating in polo, rodeo, Western riding, drill team, dressage, and professionally schooling, boarding, breeding, and selling horses. Kimbro is a full-time artist, horsewoman, and mother and loves sharing her passions with others through art. Kimbro is recognized locally, nationally, and internationally for her original paintings, one-of-a-kind sculptures, and bronzes. She received a bachelor's degree in 2004 after studying at the University of Oregon in Eugene and Eastern Oregon University in La Grande. Her admiration and respect for horses has been expressed through various mediums such as bronze, paint, poetry, drawing, serigraphy, lithography, metal working, wood, and clay. Her imagination is unlimited and she loves experimenting, exploring, and developing new artistic methods with different materials. Hundreds of her bronzes, original sculptures, and paintings have been collected across the country and around the world. Spreading positive energy through her art, Kimbro has gained an international reputation for bringing canvas and sculpture to life.

Dave LaMure Jr. lives in the Magic Valley of Idaho where the Great Basin meets the southern cliffs of the Snake River. He has worked with clay since he was 12 years old. Since that time, he has developed an art uniquely his own, from monumental public bronze sculptures to large oil canvases. His innovative style of sculpting vessels is new to the world of clay and bronze. The fine art of bas-relief, size and detail of each piece is unknown before. Look for a manifestation of feeling, heart, form, movement, composition and value. LaMure's creative enthusiasm is the narrative of the symbiotic relationship between his work and the way it is altered, like all living things and the earth. His inspiration is tethered by being an avid outdoorsman and a wilderness river guide. He was inducted into the Society of Animal Artists and is passionate about their mission to promote excellence in the portrayal of domesticated and wildlife animals in art. LaMure had public art installations in Fountain Hills, Arizona in 2016 and Twin Falls, Idaho in 2018. He has won numerous awards including the Susan and Robert Polack Prize at the National Sculpture Society's 87th Annual Awards Exhibition for Nine Muses in 2020.

Jhenna Quinn Lewis is a realist oil painter with meditative compositions featuring birds and everyday treasures, such as Buddhist begging bowls, locks, keys, and jewels. Her inspiration comes from the natural world and observing the Japanese tenets of shibui and wabi-sabi — balancing the simple with the complex while accepting imperfection and the transience of all beings. In her words, “art, and in particular wildlife art, has the power to communicate our interconnectedness to nature, that we are not separate, and to bring the viewer closer to this ecosystem we are part of.” Her work is in the permanent collections of the National Museum of Wildlife Art in Wyoming and the Leigh Yawkey Woodson Art Museum in Wisconsin as well as various personal and private collections around the world. She is represented by Meyer Gallery, InSight Gallery, Trailside Galleries, and Mockingbird Gallery. She is also a signature member of the Society of Animal Artists. Originally from Chicago, Lewis has made Southern Oregon her home for more than 25 years.

Emily Livengood is an acrylic landscape painter based in Bend, Oregon, whose work captures the raw beauty of the Cascades and High Desert environments. Inspired by the dramatic landscapes that define this region, Livengood's paintings convey a deep connection to the natural world and a reverence for the places we call home. Livengood was raised in small town Wisconsin by a family of scientists with a deep appreciation for the arts. Her undergraduate studies in biological pre-medical illustration provided a strong foundation in technique and visual storytelling, while subsequent careers in ecology and naturopathic medicine deepened her understanding of the interconnectedness of all life. These scientific disciplines influence her work, imbuing each painting with an appreciation of both the power and beauty of nature. Livengood developed a distinctive style that blends impressionistic elements with a contemporary, expressive use of color. Whether it's the intricate patterns of light across an alpine lake or the subtle transitions of color in a mountain sunset, Livengood's work invites the viewer to pause, breathe, and experience the world around them with a renewed sense of awe.

Chris Maynard carves feathers into intricate art. He combines his artistic and scientific knowledge into a new art form. His message is of beauty and appreciation of life. He uses surgery tools to carve the feathers. He sets the feathers apart from the background so their shapes cast shadows while keeping the natural colors and patterns of each feather. His sources for feathers are through an extensive network of private aviaries and zoos. All are legal to have and sell. Most of the feathers he uses were naturally molted and many of the birds whose feathers he uses are still alive and well. The art can seem delicate, yet each piece is archival and sturdy. Since feathers can represent a bridge between our present lives and our dreams, Maynard is grateful that his art has hit a soft spot in the hearts of many people and cultures. His work is in museums and private collections in North and South America, Asia, Europe and Australia.

Joyce Melander is an artist fascinated by the constructed object. Using a variety of processes such as weaving, crochet, embroidery and sewing, the Melander's intricately assembled sculptures carry traditional craft methods into the context of fine art. She incorporates a wide array of materials in her work, bringing wool, glass beads, textiles and wood veneers into a rich, almost musical, interplay of texture and rhythm. She lives and works in Santa Fe, New Mexico, a place whose desert landscape and crisp, bright colors inspire her vividly hued palette and organic shapes. A lifelong pianist, Melander plays daily, incorporating musical terms into many of her titles: Rondo, Allegro Non Troppo, Glissando. Her elaborately patterned, delicately worked sculptures, often arranged in lilting, organic configurations, bring to mind the musical abstractions of Wassily Kandinsky. Melander's approach is a more postmodern one, preoccupied with artisanal process, material opulence and extravagant construction. Her work is held in numerous public collections throughout the United States. Her work has been exhibited in numerous galleries and institutions, including June Kelly Gallery, New York; Salon de Mars, Paris, France; the Tennessee State Museum, Nashville; Aaron Payne Fine Art, Santa Fe, and many others.

Joe A. Oakes was a curious and observant child that began drawing at age five. Oakes has painted full time since 2008, and like other artists, had many previous occupations including substitute teacher, art consultant and graphic designer. After he survived cancer and the loss of a child, Oakes used these life-changing events to propel his art career forward. Oakes's landscapes burn with the first brilliant seconds of sunrise and the last fiery moments of sunset. Expressing those feelings through the use of bold, vibrant highlights of orange and shadows of violet hues is his signature. His work offers a meditative sense of calm and happiness, with a profound reverence for the land. Oakes holds a Bachelor of Fine Arts from California State University, Fullerton. His awards include Third Place at the Sears Invitational, Utah Tech, 2024; Best in Show at the Nature of Color Show, Art Brut 27, 2020; and First Place in Visions at the Chaffey Community Museum of Art in Ontario, California, 2019. His work has been included in many museum shows across the country. His work has also been published in International Artist Magazine and most recently in Artists Magazine's Acrylic Works 11 - The Best of Acrylic. Oakes resides near Palm Springs, California.

Ashley Cascade Paggi is an artist born and raised in the American West. Her middle name, Cascade, reflects not only her connection to the region but also the life she has built raising her two fierce daughters in the Cascades. Living in Oregon, Colorado, Idaho, and Northern California her entire life has instilled in her a deep connection to the Western landscape. Paggi's artwork is rooted in the terrain, wildlife, and plant life of the West, conveying a sense of resilience, grit and feminine strength that mirrors the rugged beauty of the High Desert. After working for more than 15 years as a corporate graphic designer, Paggi turned her focus to fine art. Working primarily in acrylic, watercolor and colored pencils, she creates artwork that has been licensed and sold worldwide for use on fabric textiles, home goods, outdoor gear and apparel. Her work is inspired by generations of women who shaped culture with their hands. Mothers, knitters, quilters, brilliant cooks, hostesses and interior decorators created environments in their homes that would be considered fine art today, though at the time it was simply seen as everyday women's work. Paggi carries their legacy forward, honoring the artistry found in daily life and the enduring creativity of those who came before her.

Lauris Phillips was born in La Jolla, California, and educated in fine art at the University of California Santa Cruz and at the University of Washington, Seattle. She lives and works in Santa Fe, New Mexico. In her research-based art practice, she combines study of her subject with materials collected on site, grounding her imagery in the natural world. She often uses Japanese Sumi-e ink and wild pigments, such as clay and charcoal, with brushes made from found fibers. Since 2016, she has worked with a threatened population of sandhill crane at the Modoc National Wildlife Refuge in northeastern California. There she assists a banding program, makes nest surveys and takes many photographs. The resulting paintings have been exhibited at the High Desert Museum in Bend, Oregon for four years and in a solo exhibition at Open Space Gallery in Albuquerque, New Mexico. She was featured artist at the Sandhill Crane Festival in Lodi, California, where she had a solo show and lectured on the relationship of her work at the refuge to her art. She also instructs at various crane festivals in painting cranes with Sumi-e. In 2025, she exhibited three of her crane paintings at the Albuquerque Art Museum.

From a young adult, he has built a thriving career in art "outside the box." It is the blessed few who are born into this world with a passion that was not to be interrupted by the complexity of the modern day we live in. He has embraced a total connection to the beauty and teachings of nature, which has guided his choices at each crossroad he's encountered. The common thread, which binds his life, are birds and his work embodies the fruit of that journey. His work can be found in public installations, museum collections and galleries across the country.

Adell Shetterly discovered her love for printmaking while developing community arts programs in Bend, Oregon. Her career in elementary education, curriculum development and recreation management equipped her to develop art workshops for two nonprofit organizations, Arts Central and Atelier 6000. During this time, she discovered printmaking and began studying the medium which has shaped her creative path. She studied with master printmaker Pat Clark and other experienced artists, deepening her experience in the art of printmaking. Shetterly works out of her home studio, Joy Press, where she creates inventive hand-pulled prints that investigate printmaking processes and techniques and draw on imagery that range in style from abstract to deconstructed landscape. Her work is a testament to her creativity and imagination. Reflecting about her passion for printmaking, Shetterly said, "I found my home in printmaking. I love it. It never gets old for me." Shetterly's work has been shown in group and solo exhibitions in Bend, Eugene, Manzanita and Portland, Oregon, as well as Brooklyn, New York, and New Haven, Connecticut. Her prints are part of private collections in the United States and abroad. She is represented by Tumalo Art Company in Bend and RiverSea Gallery in Astoria, Oregon.

Jen Smith grew up in the Bighorn Basin of northern Wyoming 90 miles east of Yellowstone National Park. She draws inspiration from the badlands, prairies and the Rocky Mountains where she was raised. Smith received her Bachelor of Fine Arts from Montana State University in Bozeman. Through the act of exploration, she responds to the natural world in its ever-evolving state through the medium of charcoal and pastel pencil. Her work, although naturalistic, is very modern, showcasing a High Desert palette and modern compositional considerations. A wildlife advocate and a passionate naturalist, she places her focus on presenting her subjects in their unique and exquisite beauty. Collectors across the country recognize her work as having a unique “spirit” that translates through her dynamic and bold style. She has shown her work nationally in shows and venues such as Western Visions in Jackson, Wyoming, at the National Museum of Wildlife Art, and Art of the West at the High Desert Museum in Bend, Oregon. She enjoys an industrial studio right at the edge of the Gifford Pinchot National Forest in Stabler, Washington.

Born on a ranch in Montana and raised in Southern Colorado, Summer Spitsbergen has been around ranch lands since she was a little girl. From a young age, she was romantically influenced by the scenery of the southwestern United States. The natural beauty of the vibrant landscapes, the working cowboy and horse are a common theme in Spitsbergen’s work. She currently lives on her family’s working cattle ranch. This facilitates much of the inspiration for her paintings and subject matter. Spitsbergen has been painting and drawing for most of her life and currently shows her work in prestigious galleries and shows across the United States. She has been mostly self-taught but is mentored by master artists she looks up to.

BUY NOW	$4,000

Stephen Teater is a professional illustrator, fine artist and art teacher from Bend, Oregon. Fortunate in the rigor and variety of his formal education and training, and in the skill, knowledge, experience and philosophies of his teachers and mentors, Teater began his graduate studies as a concept artist and presently focuses on fine art and narrative illustration. Every artwork he makes builds, expands upon and is informed by the preceding one. In this manner, his work is continually evolving and full of variety — in subject matter, medium and execution. In college, Teater studied fine art, as well as music theory and composition. He earned his Master of Fine Arts in illustration from the Academy of Art University in San Francisco. Along the way, Teater has explored and enjoyed working in many mediums and studying all subjects. Art is his means of expression and meditation as much as it is a philosophy, a science, a method of observing, experiencing, understanding and communicating. It's how he sees life and himself, how he'd like it and him to be.

Mike Weber

YEAR CREATED	2024
FINAL (HxWxD)	12 x 12 inches
UNFRAMED (HxWxD)	12 x 12 inches
MEDIUM	Mixed media: photographic ink transfer w/ gold leaf and acrylic
VALUE	$1,250
OPENING BID	$500
BUY NOW	$2,500

Mike Weber's art is a combination of painting and photography. His nature photography depicts the wilderness of America's national parks. His unique form of mixed media is about the craft and process of layering materials. The colors, textures and patterns are inspired by earthly landscapes, decaying signage from human life and decaying German and Dutch homesteads near his childhood home in the Midwest. Each piece uses a unique combination of materials and images that look perfect and ruined at the same time, juxtaposed to create rhythm, harmony and coherence.

Shirle Wempner

YEAR CREATED	2025
FINAL (HxWxD)	11 x 13 inches
UNFRAMED (HxWxD)	5 x 7 inches
MEDIUM	Oil
VALUE	$250
OPENING BID	$150
BUY NOW	$500

Shirle Wempner was raised on a Montana horse ranch and spent many hours in the saddle beside her father, inspecting cattle operations, attending brandings, performing at local horse shows and training the yearlings they raised for sale. Her experiences growing up on the ranch resulted in a great appreciation of nature, eventually encouraging her to put to canvas the inspiration she received on a day-to-day basis. Working predominately in oils and utilizing broad-brush strokes and palette knife techniques, she creates a feeling of impressionistic realism, concentrating on a painterly representation of the subject matter. Wempner's desired subjects are wildlife, Western and figurative representations, incorporating contemporary and historical themes.

Diane Whitehead's art has garnered significant acclaim for its vibrant portrayal of wildlife and the American West. Critics have lauded her style as an "innovative blend of Fauvism and Post-Impressionism, accented with the bold gestures of first generation abstract expressionism." Born in Spokane, Washington, she now resides in a small town in Montana. From an early age, Whitehead's harbored a deep affection for animals and the great outdoors, passions that would later become central themes in her artwork. Her technique is marked by strong brushstrokes and a fearless use of color, bringing a palpable energy to her canvases. Collectors and art enthusiasts have expressed admiration for Whitehead's ability to infuse elegance and whimsy into her pieces. Her paintings often evoke a sense of humor and warmth, making them resonate on a personal level with a diverse audience. In her studio, Whitehead continues to explore the interplay of color, texture and form, striving to evoke emotion and inspire a deeper appreciation for nature through her art. Overall, Whitehead's art stands out for its bold expression, emotional resonance, and the seamless integration of various artistic influences, making her a distinguished figure in modern wildlife and Western art.

Anton Yakushev is an award-winning, world-class artist and metal sculptor. He creates exclusive metal sculptures and works of art of varying themes and dimensions, each handcrafted with extraordinary attention to detail. Each piece is one of a kind, hand forged from bare metal, with no casting involved. Made from steel with occasional accents of copper and bronze, they're finished with a custom crafted patina designed for each intricate piece. Yakushev's works have been exhibited nationally and internationally. His sculptures are in the permanent collection at the National Ornamental Metal Museum in Memphis, Tennessee. He recently debuted a 500-pound eagle sculpture Apollo, donning more than 300 metal feathers, at the High Desert Museum. Yakushev has been working professionally with metal for more than 17 years. Creating in this medium lends him to invent his own techniques and creative approaches to this sculptural form. The artistic devices he engages in his work are experimentation and improvisation. Yakushev loves to create worlds where nothing is impossible. Enduring love and humanism is at the crux of his art.
